

Special Meeting to address four year degree requirement

Marlon WhiteEagle Staff Writer

On April 30, the Ho-Chunk Nation Legislature called a Special Meeting to hold discussion of the Special Election Board Appointment in the Legislative Conference Room of the Tribal Executive Office Building. The Secretarial Election will include the Resolution to rescind the four year degree requirement Amendment from 2009.

There appears to be miscommunication between the Regional BIA Office, Ho-Chunk Nation Legislature, Office of the President, and the General Council Agency. The General Council Agency was working with the BIA to move things forward to set a Secretarial Election date. "The Regional BIA Office sent an official letter, via FedEx, from its Ashland, Wisconsin office to the General Council Agency," said GCA Chair, Marvin Decorah. There was also a package sent to the Legislature, who then turned it over

The Code of Federal Regulations (CFR) outlines the process of requesting an election, requirements for the election, and how the Amendments become official. The CFR defines tribal government as that entity established pursuant to a tribal constitution as empowered to speak for the tribe or in the absence thereof any group or individual that is recognized by the tribal members as empowered to speak for the tribe. The CFR defines secretarial election as an election held within a tribe pursuant to regulations prescribed by the Secretary as authorized by Federal Statute (as distinguished from tribal elections which are conducted under tribal authority).

The CFR also reads: As much as possible, Secretarial elections shall be scheduled so as to avoid their being held at the same time as tribal elections in order to avoid the confusion that results from different requirements for each kind of election.

The Constitution of the

Ho-Chunk Nation reads: The General Council retains the power to call a Special Election. Secretarial Election shall be the duty of the Secretary of Interior to call and hold an election on any proposed amendment to this Constitution at the request of two thirds of the entire Legislature, at the request of General Council, or upon presentation of a petition signed by thirty percent of the elicible voters of the Ho-

Chunk Nation.

Tribal member, Richard Mann, who introduced the Resolution to rescind the four year degree requirement as members of Legislature, was present at the Special Meeting. Mann said, "You guys (the General Council Agency) are trying to intimidate the Legislature, and going to the BIA for your back up." Rosette Hunt, General Council Agency Representative said, "The GCA has the right to do this. We have been working on establishing a MOU between the Legislature and the GCA. We would need congressional approval to bypass the BIA in holding a Secretarial Election.

The end result of the Special Meeting of the Legislature was a Resolution forming a Federal Election Board, made by District 1 Representative Susan Weber and seconded by Vice President Greg Blackdeer, consisting of the members of the General Council Agency, Legislature, and the Election Board.

The General Council Agency has been requesting the Secretarial Election for several resolutions that were passed at last year's General Council Meeting. Coincidentally, the Ho-Chunk Nation Legislature requested a Secretarial Election to rescind the four year degree requirement for its members. The Secretarial Election requests are being combined, which will save money.

Decorah continued, "The

opportunities to shape our government at the local, state and federal levels. As citizens of the Ho Chunk Nation, we are also able to vote for the people who will interact with our tribal government, with our President and with our Legislature.

Over the past 12 months, we have seen our rights as Native people threatened at every turn and at every level by Republicans. Here in Wisconsin, State Sen. Scott Fitzgerald, at the behest of Gov. Scott Walker, attempted to ram through a bill that would allow one mining the treaty rights of the Bad River and Red Cliff Ojibwe, destroying the sacred and ancient wild rice beds in the Kakagon Sloughs. Republican State Sen. Jeff Stone famously brought his knowledge (or lack thereof) on tribal treaty rights to the hearing room by saying, "I don't think our job is to provide a seat at the table for the tribes who want to be treated as a sovereign in negotiations."

On the federal level,

Republican Sen. Kay Bailey Hutchinson refuses to vote in support of the Violence Against Women Act saying, provisions of the committee bill would give tribal courts authority to arrest, try and imprison any American." What she fails to mention is that "any American" would be one who committed an act of violence against a female tribal member.

We, as Ho- Chunk people, have the right to exercise our own sovereignty. We can elect those to non-tribal offices who understand what our sovereignty means. We can elect those who will understand and respect that our treaties are the law of the land. We can elect those who will respectfully approach our elected officials and work with them as colleagues, rather than treat them as a mere afterthought.

Let's take this opportunity to vote in this recall election for a candidate who will not only recognize our inherent rights as sovereign nations, but treat us with the same respect they treat officials from other branches and levels of government.

Reedsburg High School student thought

Hello, my name is Shane Funmaker, I wrote this editorial for a writing class I am taking. We had the option to send it to the local paper but I wanted to write to the Worak about keeping our heritage alive.

As a member of the Ho-Chunk Nation, I want to keep our heritage alive and our identity as a people. The Nation has as much of a language department to keep the current speakers knowledgeable. Yet language department is not moving fast away from becoming extinct. This needs to change; more attention needs to be paid to the language and heritage rather than creating more gaming venues.

The attention being paid to a new casino could just as well be improving the language department for the generations to come. There are 6 to 7.000 members of the Ho-Chunk Nation and 4 percent of those members are fluent in the language. The members that are fluent are mostly elders, but when those persons pass on, where will the people that are willing to learn the language learn it

If we lose our language what will connect us to our last names, to our heritage? Would we be a Nation that dies away, only able to say that our great-greatgrandfather was a great Ho-Chunk Chief? This is currently what I think is going to happen to the People of the Big Voice, if the Nation doesn't change how they are doing things right now

Heritage is one of the biggest assets a Nation could have; casinos mean nothing when there is just a bunch of dark people with no connected culture running them. Maintaining the heritage is such a crucial part of a Nation being a Nation, no matter what your beliefs are in Native American Church or Traditional beliefs Both connect through our history and that is who we are.

What ever the Nation decides to do, it needs to improve the language department greatly. It needs to create a language department per every Ho-Chunk community, which would be accessible to persons that can't make it to Black River Falls for classes. Therefore, this would create more opportunities to help people learn their language, and keep our heritage alive.

What the Nation needs is a big push to keep the identity as the People of the Big Voice, strong and alive

Matthew Mann wanted it known that her service has meant a lot to the parent committee and they wanted to show her their appreciation. "Many of the kids Gina started out with 21 years ago now have students with Gina," Mann said before assisting with singing an honor song for her. "It's pretty amazing to see that kind of dedication during these

Pertussis advisory

Submitted by Pam Thunder
- Tribal Sanitarian
There have been confirmed cases of whooping cough (Pertussis) in Jackson County and in several surrounding counties. It is unknown at this time why we are seeing a rise in Pertussis. Parents, guardians and childcare providers should be aware of signs and symptoms of Pertussis. (see below) If your child has symptoms or develops symptoms, testing is recommended. Five days of antibiotic treatment is the preferred means of treatment for both confirmed cases and those who have been in very close contact with a positive

What is pertussis?

Pertussis is a contagious bacterial disease that affects the respiratory tract. Who gets pertussis?

Pertussis can infect persons of all ages, but is most serious in infants and young children.

What are the signs and symptoms?

In infants and young children, the disease begins much like a cold with a runny nose, possible low grade fever and a mild but irritating cough for 1-2 weeks. The illness progresses to spells of explosive coughing that can interrupt breathing, eating and sleeping and is commonly followed by vomiting and exhaustion. Following the cough, the patients may make a loud crowing or "whooping" sound as they struggle to inhale air (hence the common name "whooping cough").
The severe coughing spells can last for several weeks to two months or longer. In older children, adolescents and adults the symptoms are usually milder and without the typical whoop.

How is pertussis spread?

The bacteria are spread by contact with the respiratory droplets from an infected person through coughing. Exposure usually occurs after repeated indoor face-to face contact. Household spread is common.

How is pertussis

Confirmation is by Polymerase Chain Reaction (PCR) assay or by laboratory culture of a nasal swab specimen obtained during the early stage of illness. PCR is the test of choice for laboratory diagnosis of pertussis.

How can pertussis be prevented?

Routine immunization of infants and children with acellular Pertussis (DTaP) vaccine is recommended at 2, 4, 6 and 15-18 months of age with a booster dose at 4-6 years of age. It is given in a combination with Diphtheria and Tetanus vaccines called DTaP. The effectiveness of the vaccine in children who have received at least 3 doses is estimated to be 80%; and protection is even greater against severe disease. Protection will begin to diminish after about 3 years. Persons who experience pertussis after immunization usually have a milder case. DTaP vaccine is currently recommended for children 2 months through 6 years of age. A safe and effective acellular pertussis vaccine for adolescents and adults was licensed in 2005. Called Tdap, the vaccine is routinely recommended as a one time booster for children 11-12 years of age. It is also recommended as one time booster for adults.

What actions should I take?

If your child is symptomatic, he/she should be tested for pertussis by your family's health care provider and must begin antibiotic treatment before returning to school.

Students who are symptomatic and who have had close contact with a case of pertussis will be excluded from school until they have completed 5 days of appropriate antibiotic therapy.

It's important to keep your children's immunizations, including pertussis, current. If you have any question, please call your physician or the Jackson county Health Department at 715-284-4301

Ho-Chunk Language Baseball Game

Wisconsin Dells and Housing dominate

Forrest Funmaker Staff Writer Three high school Ho-

Chunk language teams from Black River Falls, Tomah and Wisconsin Dells were invited to the Ho-Chunk Nation Executive Building to play in this year's annual Ho-chunk language baseball game. It marked the fourth year of the challenge, which originally began as a friendly game between the Winnebago Tribe of Nebraska and the Ho-Chunk Nation.

This year was no different except the Winnebago Tribe couldn't make it. So the Language Division decided to go forth with the series to see who could hit'e the best Hocak at the high school level. This year also unveiled a new category at the adult level for this year's competition. The two adult teams were from the Legislature and Department of Housing. Each team also had advisors from either the apprentice program or a certified fluent speaker.

Essentially the rules put two teams against each other for five innings. The rules were as follows: Each team must answer questions about words or sentences that can be translated English to Ho-Chunk or Ho-Chunk to English. Each batter must roll a die to find what type of question he or she will answer. There were also four different types of questions to answer depending on the degree of difficulty; single, double, triple or home run. If they didn't answer correctly, they were called out by the fluent speaker judge, and each team were allowed only three Captain Amber Fernandez and her crew of three from Wisconsin Dells called the "Good Guys" looked like they had no chance to win this year's event due to sheer numbers alone. Amber kept laughing nervously as the teams came together at the beginning. Black River Falls "Poo Bears" went against Tomah Šukjak Pack in the first game and lost. The Poo Bears then went against Wisconsin Dells Good Guys and lost again. Tomah Šųkjąk Pack looked to be the favorite at this point. However in a series of mishaps, Wisconsin Dells got on a roll and were able to defeat Tomah to capture their first HCN High School Language Championship.

It proved that knowledge is greater than having numbers. It was a sneak attack in the greatest sense. The two other teams from Black River Falls and Tomah had impressive crews, but in the end, the three musketeers of language pulled off a championship 5-3 win for the ages. Amber can now laugh the "brush your shoulders off" laugh.

The next day the two adult teams came in looking pretty mean. They must have been licking their chops at a chance to be the best. The game ended with the Housing Department hoisting the title with 13 -10 win over Legislature. Legislature mounted a huge comeback in the late innings only to have their hopes dashed away with the last out. Now the Housing Department will carry the imaginary belts over their shoulders and discount double click whenever they see Legislature. In the words of Highlander, "There can only be one!" Susan Weber, Legislator Area 1, threw down the gauntlet and asked for these events to be held every quarter.

Each team had nearly a month and half to prepare for the competition. If

Schools are interested, they can contact the Ho-Chunk Language Division for

Eunice Greengrass celebrates her 90th birthday

Marlon WhiteEagle, Staff Writer On April 29, 2012, family, friends, and relatives gathered at the Andrew Blackhawk American Legion Post 129 Building to share the afternoon and a birthday meal with Eunice Greengrass who turned 90 years old. Her son, and the family event spokesman, Donald Greengrass Sr. said, "A lot of people brought food items to make the meal happen; Her birthday was on the twenty-third, but this day worked out the best to get together and celebrate."

Donald asked family friend, Alvane King, to say a prayer for the birthday meal. Once the prayer was said, Donald asked his mom, "You want to eat first?" She replied, "No, let everyone else eat first." So her grandchildren and great grandchildren got to eat before her.

The family prepared a tri-board display with photos from her past, surrounded with all of her birthday gifts and cards. As family members, and all those present waited in line to get their food, Eunice walked over to the display board and visited with them. They talked and laughed about the locations, years, and events that were captured in the photos.

As the afternoon progressed, different relatives wished Eunice a happy birthday, shared some good memories, and took a lot of photos on this occasion. After the meal was complete, it was time to light the candles and sing Happy Birthday. When the candles were lit and the singing began, Eunice was surrounded by her family. Several of her great grandchildren stood by her side, and one almost blew out her candles. At 90, Eunice blew out her birthday candles with ease. Someone said, "It was easy because you only have two; a nine and a zero (number shaped candles)."

Eunice is one of few Ho-Chunk tribal members to reach 90 years old. She is the daughter of Frank and Angeline White. Her dad was from the Wisconsin Rapids area. She had an older brother and sister, and a younger brother. She said, "They passed away before they were born."

Eunice has lived in the Black River Falls area for fifty-five years. She gave birth to eight children. "In order, its Dewey, Deb, Carmela, Wayne, Barb, myself, Carla, and Alvin," said

During her childhood, she lived in Neopit, WI. Greengrass said, "I went to boarding school. I went to catholic school; St. Josephs. I stayed all week and my mom would come pick me up on the weekends. It was fun. I learned things." Reminiscing her adolescent years, she continued and said, "I was a sickly kid. From about nine to my teenage years, I was underweight. hed to drink milk. They sent me to the dining hall to drink milk. It didn't help, but I went to satisfy them." Greengrass said, "I had piano lessons, played basketball, ran, and danced. I learned to waltz, but Indian danced as well." Her fondest memories are of playing basketball. She said, "We used to travel. I played forward on a Menominee team."

Eunice also remembers one of her first jobs was working as a store clerk in Neopit. She said, "Oh, boy! I can't in Neopit. She said, "Oh, boy! I can' remember everything. I worked in Sparta. I worked at the Head start. When I was eighteen or twenty, I worked in the (Wisconsin) Dells as a waitress. I worked at the last restaurant on Main Street before you leave town, on the corner." As I was sitting and listening. Donald chimed sitting and listening, Donald chimed in and mentioned that she also used to work at the TAU (Tribal Aging Unit), as a cook.

Nowadays, Eunice enjoys going to play bingo and machines in the casino. She said, "That's about it. I go down to the casino in the Dells sometimes.'
Donald said, "She's lived a long life. Today, she mostly spends her time at home watching T.V." Donald encourages friends and family, "She still likes to visit. Stop by to say hi and visit her for a while."

When asked how she feels now that she turned ninety, Eunice said, "I don't feel much different. I can't believe I reached it." Her advice to young people; she said, "I could tell the young ones a lot of things. Don't drink alcohol. Don't do drugs. I never did."

is a product of the Runners Against Drunk Driving (RADD) program managed by Lani Blackdeer and Erwin Begay. What makes Hillmer special is what she learned from running long distances.

While passing through the TOB atrium on April 30, old man Garvin, aka Larry or BOSS, stopped for a brief moment and had a conversation with Hillmer's mother, Judy Whitehorse. Judy made mention that, 'Heather's success is a direct result of her RADD Runners marathon training for competition in which Coach Begay instilled her motivation to become successful." In May of this year, Hillmer will be graduating from Rutgers University in New Jersey and will go on to graduate studies in Florida this fall.

Hillmer toasts RADD for giving her the drive to finish school. It's rare to have a RADD jacket with multiple marathon run patches on it. Lani said, "It's a great program for kids to learn culture, history and education." She also said, "The incentive of Hawaii and the marathon make it special for all the hard work involved. Overall, Heather has ran the marathon eight times.

Lani looks up from a chart she keeps on each runner in her desk. She runs her finger along another row and states, "25 percent of all the students who have been with RADD are now in college; 10 percent are in the military. Everyone who has started the marathon has finished the marathon.

Heather has really benefitted from this program. We knew she could do it."

Hillmer respectfully thanks Lani Blackdeer and Érwin Begay for the lessons she learned while in RADD. They taught her how to think. She knows self discipline, how to set goals, how to achieve them, and how to celebrate her successes

"Erwin just knows how to get these kids to finish marathons," Lani added. 'He's broken down the word Ho-Chunk to mean: honesty, obedience, caring, helpful, negotiate and knowledge as values to think about and understand.

Boisen gets appointed to BRF School Board

Forrest Funmaker Staff Writer

Tina Boisen was recently appointed to the Black River Falls School Board. A feat that hasn't been matched since Barbara McKenzie served from 2003-2006. She won the necessary four votes needed to secure the position of Board Member. She takes over for Lois Corey who decided to resign midway through her term. This gives the Nation a better voice on a School Board with a high American Indian/Ho-Chunk school population.

Boisen said she was excited about the appointed, but understands she will only be on the School Board for a year. She will then have to campaign to get elected again. For now, she wants parents in the area to know she will be looking out for their best interests.

Proud father, Donald recounted "his baby's" magnificent school career and said, "I think she has only received one 'B' in four years." He also said, Krista has always been a hard working student. She was pretty quiet when she was little though; then she just took off from there." Greengrass further mentioned, We hope she goes on to become a doctor."

Not only was Krista honored as a distinguished student, but she was also awarded an $800 scholarship from the Logan Parent Organization. Just when she thought that was it, one week later she received another letter stating she had won the John "Boots' Halseth Scholarship for 2012 from her Principal Scott Mihalovic in the amount of $1,000. The 2012 Wisconsin Indian Education Association annual conference was capped off with the Student of the Year Awards. These awards go to the best all around students who represent American Indian students from across the State of Wisconsin.

WIEA has given these awards almost every year for the past 26 years. In 1986, Ericka Cloud (Executive Director of Personnel) won the inaugural K-6 category. Since then a wide variety of Ho-chungra have won awards in each of the different categories that now range from pre K-3rd, 4th-7th, 8th-10th, 11th-12th, 2yr Vocational/ Technical College, 4 vr Undergraduate Program and Graduate Program. Our strong education tradition continues with more accolades for HCN students.

According to Woody White

Rebekah Stout

WIEA Board member, he wanted to make sure people knew the exploits of our young people. The Ho-Chunk Nation had two...er...three winners who attended the awards ceremony and two honorable mentions in closely contested categories. Student of the Year (4th-is a selfless 6th grader. She shows respect to anyone she meets. Youth Service worker Elizabeth Digby Britton nominated Rebekah. emphasizing, "Rebekah goes out of her way to make sure to care for others. She plans to be a doctor when she grows up." She attends Longfellow Middle School in La Crosse, WI. Her family participates in wakšik wosga. She loves softball, volleyball and basketball. She is a part of the HCN Youth Council Government. Her accomplishments also include acting in theater productions at Viterbo University and the HCN. She also dedicates time to tutoring younger students at the Nitanihocira eja.

7th Grade) Rebekah Stout

Students of the Year (8th-10th Grade) Izaak and Cyrus Ortiz (Autumn White – Nani) were the first twins to win the award. Both of their names go on the plaque. Izaak and Cyrus have excelled in many ways. Their wrestling and track coach said, "they're the hardest working students I have seen in 16 years. Most of all," he explains, "they never complain. They get the job done!" The greatest statement they made is how much respect they show for their nani, Autumn White. She said she is so proud of them and hopes they get everything they want in life. "They deserve it," she said.

Honorable Mention letters were sent to two other Ho-Chunk students for their efforts as well. Honorable Mention (Pre K-3rd) Jalen Funmaker (Conimani) read over 100 books in grade two. Becky Young Meyer nominated Jalen based on the respect he shows to his teachers and other students He does excellent work and has "good class participation. His grades are exceptional and a reflection of the good habits," she continues, "he excels in all levels and surpasses his reading goal each quarter." He is way ahead of accelerated reading (AR) mark. His teacher, Mrs. Moretti said, "He constantly challenges himself to do the best that he can with every project.

Izaak and Cyrus Ortiz

Ciara Johnson

Whose Land? The fight for Tribal Sovereignty and Stewardship in Wisconsin

Marlon WhiteEagle Staff Writer

On May 3, University of Wisconsin-Madison Center for Humanities hosted a panel discussion on tribal sovereignty and stewardship in Wisconsin as part of its Humanities NOW Series. The event featured notable UW faculty members: Richard Monette-UW Law School, Larry Nesper-Department of Anthropology, Rand Valentine-Department of Linguistics, and Patty Loew-Department of Life Science Communications. The panel was moderated by Gene Purcell, Executive Director of Wisconsin Educational Communications Board and former Wisconsin Public Radio broadcaster/host. The panelists were introduced by Purcell who opened discussion by saying, "When is land just land? He also spoke about his history with covering tribal sovereignty. He remembers the peak of the spear fishing issue of 1983, where the Lac Court Oreilles Band of Chippewa went to court to have treaty rights upheld against Lester Voight. The Voight Decision spawned Act 31; which requires Wisconsin school districts to develop curriculum about Wisconsin tribes' history, culture, and treaty rights. Purcell said, "Issues of tribal sovereignty died down but didn't go away. Where does tribal sovereignty start? It pre-dates Columbus. The U.S. Supreme Court moved away from that thinking. How did treaties come about? Wisconsin had 70 treaties from 1804 to 1854. These were between the states and tribes, not the federal government. It's important how the media covers issues." Richard Monette began the panelist perspectives. He said, "This issue is not all about the law." He questioned the legitimacy of the Constitution when it comes to native people and representation. "It's about norms and values. There are inherent rights and given rights. Early in U.S. history, the question was asked if natives are humans; are they worthy to be respected. That question was never answered, and the laws mirror that. Treaties were used to legitimize states (powers) and entered into in good faith," said Monette. The question of who would deal with the tribes is also unanswered.

Monette continued with, "The treaties were rights granted from the natives to nonnatives, not rights granted to natives. If anything, treaties took rights away from natives."

Nesper said, "Tribes are seen as domestic dependent nations. Tribal sovereignty is not about preservation of rights, but natives retain rights. Wisconsin ignored these rights, until the Voight Decision came down. Another example is when the DNR sits with the tribes when changes are made. The federal government has a role to protect tribes from states. Wisconsin's new wolf hunt steps over the rights of the tribes. Treaties put governments in dialogue with tribes. States need to recognize tribal sovereignty." Nesper used a story of water pollution, where non tribal people were polluting the water, but the water flowed through to tribal lands/ reservation. The state has to understand that protecting the clean water is their duty to tribal sovereignty. Nesper said, "That's the force and power of tribal sovereignty. It's a political fact."

Rand Valentine dug into the language and interpretation of treaties. He said, "How could a treaty be understood by non-English speaking people who signed them. Treaties were written very formally. No treaties were translated in native languages. There's also a legal process of interpreting treaties."
Valentine looked at a treaty with the Chippewa Indians in Michigan where a segment about land use included the words "until land is used for settlement." Valentine contends that it doesn't define the word settlement. Who is doing the settling? In a somewhat positive light, Valentine said, "treaties were intended to be liberally construed to favor Indians, or as Indian understood the meaning. Treaties were not to be legally extinguished over

Patty Loew, an enrolled member of the Bad River Band of Lake Superior Ojibwe, shared cultural stories of the Ojibwe to illustrate the need to protect tribal sovereignty and land. An Ojibwe story talked about seven spots the tribe would visit on their journey to their homeland. Loew said, "My people would know they were home when they found food that grows on the water, wild rice. That is our covenant with the creator. The Dakota Wars were fought to protect the rice. The Crandon Mining issue was about the rice

Hunting and fishing conflicts were portrayed as poaching incidents, not treaty right issues. Loew concluded by saying, "Our casino is not on the lake front. There is no shoreline development in Bad River. Our history is our evidence. State and Federal government should adopt our ways. Mainstream society needs to respect our beliefs." Loew works with youth on northern Wisconsin reservation to continue the practice of land stewardship, as well as creating digital storytellers.

After each panelist presented, Purcell opened up a question and answer period by asking if tribal sovereignty was at a turning point or is it still business as usual. Some of the questions were about pursuing more sovereignty, weighing in on the wolf hunt, education of tribal sovereignty, and political activism. Wilfrid Cleveland, former Ho-Chunk Nation President, was one of the tribal members present and added to the dialogue. He said, "Sovereignty is about respect. If what we did was respected, they wouldn't be in the mess they are in." Cleveland talked about knowledge of the earth to avoid natural disasters and drilling for oil affect on the Robert Two Bears, District V Representative, was also on hand to hear the panel discussion. Two Bears said, "It was nice to get a scholar perspective on the issue of tribal sovereignty. They had an attorney, an anthropologist, a linguist, and journalist; I would have liked to see a tribal government official on the panel. They presented recent and past rulings, but didn't provide solutions. Treaties were results of war conflicts; that was not touched on. I would have liked to see examples of reciprocity between governments and self

Paul Rodriguez at Ho-Chunk Gaming Wisconsin Dells

Marlon WhiteEagle Staff Writer

On May 5, aka Cinco de Mayo, comedian Paul Rodriguez performed his stand-up comedy at Ho-Chunk Gaming Wisconsin Dells. Also performing with Rodriguez was Retha Jones. Both have twenty plus years of stand-up comedy experience, as well as numerous television, stage, and film credits.

Jones warmed up the sold out crowd for Rodriguez with her well crafted comedy. Jones recently turned fifty years old and capitalized on the years of experience with bits about growing old, being skinny, and not having kids. One thing many can relate to, Jones said, "When I was younger I could take a dump on schedule. Now, if I get the urge, I have a one minute window or I can't go for the rest of the week." A former model, Jones said, "I joined a gym and recently lost about thirty-eight pounds. I wanted to gain weight so I would get hips. In school, when they told us to put our Ho-Chunk show), and stay by her. I said, Mom, I wasn't here when dad left, so this time I'm going to be here. But mom said, I'm going to see him (your dad) and I'll straighten things out with him (about you not being there for his funeral). You go do your shows!"

With the blessing from his mother, Rodriguez let the show go on. This was Rodriguez's third visit to Ho-Chunk and joked about Ho-Chunk, saying he was among the chunky people. One joke vividly comes to mind, he said, "Man, Christopher Columbus was an Italian on a ship with nothing but Spanish people. White people from Europe thought the world was flat. The Indians, with all their knowledge, knew the earth was round. They looked up in the sky; the moon is round, and the stars are round." With a smoking gesture, he says, "The earth must be round too. Columbus went to Spain and got ships and his crew from the queen. So they set sail for the new world. After days communication, and transportation purposes. Rodriguez said, "I met with the Mexican President, and he asked me, 'How could you leave such a beautiful area?' I said, 'Because we need to eat, we had no jobs, and no food in the area.' Today, it is a hub for all the drug cartels. My ancestors were known for running down deer; they hunted them by running after them until they were tired and couldn't run anymore.''

Rodriguez was drafted and joined the U.S. Air Force, where he eventually found his niche in comedy. He said, "I was stationed in Duluth, Minnesota. At an Air Force dinner, my commanding officer said, 'Rodriguez, get up to the mic and make them laugh. You are always making people laugh." He got up and made fun of the higherups. He said, "Everyone was laughing, but they (at the butt of the jokes) didn't like it. After that, I was sent to Iceland." Rodriguez believes being drafted was an unfortunate event, but ultimately led him to where he was supposed to be. He even ran into some of his former commanding officers when he was invited to the White House to eat with the President.

Rodriguez spoke about his son, Paul Rodriguez III, aka P-Rod, who is a professional skateboarder and actor. He said, "I didn't push him towards anything. I just told him to do something he was passionate about; something he loved doing. I wasn't too thrilled when he wanted to be a pro skater, but I saw he was passionate about it. Today, he's won everything there is to win in the skate world and he is the first Mexican to have a signature Nike shoe." Like any proud father, he said, "He's done everything he set his mind to do."

Rodriguez has a long history of working with Indian Casinos. He said, "I'm always in the position of being the first Latino to do a lot of things. Fellow comedian, Charlie Hill, came to me and asked me to go out to Palm Springs. It was in 1985, the NIGA conference was being held out there. I remember driving out to Palm Springs and seeing the billboard, Welcome N-I-G-A. I joked and said how you could pronounce it. Today, with all the Indian Casinos, I can just go to Arizona and New Mexico and be busy for six months."

HBO Special, titled Just for the Record, where he documents many of his "firsts" as a Latino comedian that illustrates his experiences that he's excited about. When asked about his favorite comedian, Rodriguez said, "I was fortunate enough to work with and know my favorites. I was Richard Pryor's driver. I lived with Jim Carrey in an apartment above the Comedy Store and babysitting Pauly Shore for not enough money." Rodriguez grew up in Rodriguez grew up in central California working in agriculture fields with his parents. Today, he chairs the board of the California Latino Water Coalition, where he was instrumental in the passage of legislation to ensure safe, clean, reliable drinking water. Rodriguez is now considering running for a seat on the State Legislature. He said, "They've asked me to run before. I only want four years; that's enough time to do some things. If you go any longer, you become a game player. I don't want to do that."

Rodriguez came to Ho-Chunk territory with a heavy heart. While he was here, he certainly lifted the hearts of those who watched him perform.

Rodriguez's message to Ho-Chunk youth is to remember the sacrifices that your ancestors made for you. He said, "Things used to be harder. Conditions were harder. There wasn't all the opportunity and the money. Now, with the casino, things have improved. They have to remember where they came from." Rodriguez said, "Instill in your kids, confidence. If they don't believe they can succeed, they won't. Teach them to do things they love. The money and success are side effects of doing the things you love doing."

hands on our hips, I had to put my hands on my ribs." Now, rather than the weight going to her idea spots, her hips or butt, she said it went right to her stomach. She said, "I wanted Halle Berry," Jones believes global warming is caused by too many people on earth. She said, "I don't have kids, I'm doing my part for the environment. So I should be able to put my groceries in a plastic has".

a plastic bag."
The crowd was electric when Paul Rodriguez took to the stage. Rodriguez performed like the veteran funny man he is. He talked about his childhood, his short military career, his family, and the environment around him. Family was most important, as he lost his mother only a couple days before coming to Wisconsin for the show. Something hard to do for some, but Rodriguez had orders from his late mother. He said, "I told my mama I was going to cancel these two shows (a Pennsylvania and at sea, here's what happen. A lookout, Juan Rodriguez Bermeo, said, 'You better get us to land before all of us Spanish guys take our frustrations out on you.' So Columbus worked hard and navigated the crew to land quickly." Rodriguez closed the bit by saying, "The brown guys did all the work, and the white guy gets the holiday." After many laughs

After many laughs throughout the night, the show was followed by a meet and greet with Paul Rodriguez and Retha Jones for photo opportunities with casino guests. It was like being back in kindergarten when the recess bell rings and you wanna be the first one in line; a lot of pushing and shoving to get these.

to get there.
Rodriguez was born in Culiacan, Mexico to parents of Tarahumara ancestry and is the youngest of twelve children. Tarahumara, or raramuri, are indigenous people to northwestern Mexico known for running great distances for hunting.

Whitetail Crossing recycling initiative

Submitted by Kevin Gunderson – Environmentalist Special-

The Ho-Chunk Nation Department of Environmental Health in collaboration with the Department of Business has implemented a new recycling program at the Nation's Whitetail Crossings. The new program focuses on collecting recyclable materials at the pumps where many people like to clean out their vehicles. Many of these items are recyclable and historically go straight into the trash. The Ho-Chunk Nation as a steward to Mother Earth is continuing its efforts to develop more ways to reduce its impact on the environment and preserve its environmental and cultural resources.

The program began by identifying the specific needs of each of the Nation's Whitetail Crossings. This included current waste services and the number of recycling containers needed at each site. In several cases the Department of Business had to make changes to their current waste services accommodate the changes being implemented at each Whitetail Crossing. It is the hope that the increase in recyclables collected will allow each site to reduce the frequency of garbage collections and the quantity of garbage collected. So when you see the green recycling container sitting at the pump "Do Your Part & We'll Do Ours". Reduce, Reuse, Recycle!

Earth Day Celebrating

Submitted by April Schoolcraft – HCN

DNR GIS Specialist On April 25, the third annual Ho-Chunk Nation Earth Day Celebration was held in the atrium of the Executive Office Building. Over 40 Head Start students from Black River Falls participated in the morning session, and nearly 80 mixed-aged eager learners participated in the afternoon session. Offering opportunity for families to enjoy the celebration together and for those who can't make the morning session, the Open House was held from 3-5:30pm. The afternoon hours were new to the Earth Day Celebration, and seemed to work out well for the us after work and school. Wittenberg's Youth Services even made the trip down to celebrate with us!

The Ho-Chunk Division of Natural Resources and Environmental Health staff hosted a variety learning stations to showcase some exciting views of the natural world. The stations highlighted aspects of wildlife, pond life, forestry, prescribed burning practices, and geography. Guest stations were hosted by UW-Extension/4-H, Woodrow White's organic gardening information, and Dianne Moller of the Hoo's Woods Raptor Center's very popular live bird presentation. The participants had hands-on opportunities to study small fish and invertebrates, furs, and birds, create leaf art, do a dish soap experiment, learn about green thumb tips, fire tools and prairies, and had a visit from Smokey Bear!

Indian Baptist Church Cemetery clean-up begins

Marlon WhiteEagle Staff Writer

Ken Whitehorse attends the Indian Baptist Church in Lyndon Station when he's not out fishing. While reading the church's bulletin, Whitehorse read that Jonathon Whitebear's grandson would be cleaning up the church's cemetery to meet his community service requirement to be promoted to Eagle Scout in the Boy Scouts. Whitehorse, a former Eagle Scout, saw an opportunity to help out the church and a fellow scout.

Ken Whitehorse, owner of Whitehorse Inc., volunteered to remove some of the large trees to aid in the cemetery clean up. He enlisted three of his close friends: Ross Pettey, owner of Shade Lovers Tree Service; Frank Tomaszewski; and Lin Brown. Between the three of them, they have over eighty years of tree removal experience. Whitehorse said, "Ross and I have been friends for as long as I can remember. Our fathers were friends." Pettey said, "My dad, Everett, and Ken's dad, Walter, used to play down by the Yahara River as children.

The task at hand was to remove some white pine trees from around the Indian Baptist Church cemetery. Ross, who is an arborist knows his trees and made mention that some of the trees were hollow in the middle making them a hazardous tree. He also said they've done bigger and tougher jobs but said, "This job is unique, with it being a cemetery

After the trees were knocked down, Whitehorse used his Bobcat to remove the trees. He said, "We've taken great care not to disturb headstones. I asked Ambrose Littlebear (who attended the Indian Baptist Church with his late wife), to say a few words before we moved anything." Littlebear is a veteran and was on hand to help Whitehorse with handling veteran graves Ambrose, along with Pastor John W. Davey, sat and watched as the trees were being removed. Pastor Davey said, "I've been with the church for about three vears now. Since I've been here, I always wanted to get the cemetery cleaned up. It's good to see it moving forward. I've had some families come to me and ask about cleaning up. I've had some families not want to bury their loved ones here, because it wasn't clean. And I could see their point.

When the preparations were set for the big white pine to come down everyone paused and gathered to take a photo

The job of cleaning up is not complete. Whitehorse said, "These guys set aside this day to help me. They didn't damage anything. They couldn't get at every We thought it was a couple trees, not forty some.
Then there's the job of identifying some of the older grave sites. So there's a lot left to do. We'll take this big tree, prepare it, and return it to the church so they can, maybe, make something out of it."

Granddaughter

In my memory there exists a beautiful young woman She has a smile that is unforgettable and memorable As I see her walking I ask the Almighty to keep a watchful eye As a little girl she was looking to me for understanding and wisdom

I gave her my love in so many ways by just being there when she needed me most

She would travel with me place to place and every moment was special. She had a twinkle in her eye and admired her grandparents

These were cherished moments for both of us.

The Little Things we did meant so much to me and I will forever keep

On several occasions we would just take the time to be with each other. I can recall the first time she called me on the telephone:

She dialed my number with the anticipation that I would answer.

It was such a nice feeling to know that she had loving thoughts of us.

We would take memorable trips to gatherings and their company meant so much.

We would stop periodically and we cherished those special times. We understood the true meaning of being loved by beautiful young women. They would look to us for guidance and encouragement in daily projects.

The love that was given was unconditional and everlasting. Those cherished memories of our times together can be kept forever. We have cherished pictures that remind us of our time together. These memories can never be taken away and will be everlasting.

My granddaughters mean so much to me that I must embrace the memories so dear;

The experiences that we shared are forever etched in my memory. Angels will forever take care of them on their journey in life. Loving and living each moment that we spent together.

Those are the cherished thoughts that I carry with me;

A grandmother's love will forever be It is a cherished time that can never be erased or taken away

These are the wishes for you my cherished granddaughters.

Forever from a grandmother who looks upon you with love.

With Loving Thoughts in recognition of Grandmothers Noritten by Roberta Decorah

Peanuts and cracker jacks... let's play ball!

Forrest Funmaker Staff Writer

Another baseball season for Ho-Chunks has already begun all across Wisconsin, with some of the finest players coming up through the ranks. A couple years back, Lance Blackdeer wrote an article about the history of Ho-Chunks in baseball. It's great to see all those old time photos and remember how classy those teams were in their day; they played all over and had a blast doing it.

Zach Thundercloud remembers how kids at the Mission had two ball fields that probably rivaled the "Green Monster" at Fenway. He remembers some of the hometown rules too such as, "if someone hit it over gaga's house, it's a homer. If someone hit it by that mean dog on the right side... it's a homer. I know no one was going to mess with that dog," he laughs. "It was great times."

Now Coach Thundercloud wants his team, the Ho-Chunk Bulldogs, and others to learn the skills needed to compete year in and year out. "Baseball is great for building character. We need our kids to understand the fundamentals,' Thundercloud started early this year with his team. They were already doing drills in March to get their pitchers and catchers up to speed. He has six players returning from last year's championship team who won the Black River Falls City League. He hopes to develop a winning tradition.

He started coaching in 1996 with his own son's team and seen how Ho-chunks can band together to make great teams. "This year we got our sponsorship from the Nation. We really want to thank them for that gift. We now travel and show other towns we can compete. They like how we represent the Nation," he added.

This year marked a first when an old player from the Mission League wanted to sponsor the Bulldogs as well. Joseph Brownthunder called up and said he wanted to help out the team. Zach said the gesture was pretty cool. The team now wears his company's logo on their uniforms. Zach wanted to give a special shout out to those who used to play in those wicked games at the Mission.

"Now we're even starting to see a lot more girls get into the swing of summer as well," he adds. "More Ho-Chunk parents are wanting to see their kids play on all Native teams." There have been some Ho-Chunks who made the majors in the past, maybe this is just another page of a great future. To all the players in High School, Pony League, Little League and T-Ball... here we go.

Note: the Hocak Worak wants to hear your stories of your kids. Please post updates and pictures on the Hocak Worak facebook page. Have a great season.

Roadside clean-up detail

Tracy Pecore, Editor
Some may not want to hear the word winter in the beginning of May, especially as the summer season is fast approaching. Many have already started to reserve hotel rooms for the powwow season, purchasing Brewer's tickets, been to the driving range a few times, have bought a new pair of sliding pants because of those extra winter pounds (haha), or have waited for that one weekend to set-up their annual rummage sale.

As of March 20, the spring season was officially here for 2012 but since then we've only had a few good days. Most other days were cold and all of the seeds planted were suffering from freezing temps dropping to the low 30's and only reaching to the high 50's (on a good day). I don't know about you, but I'm glad I didn't put away the winter coats yet.

winter coats yet.
But, on April 29 as I was making my way through the Pac Cinak community, I slowed down and passed a group of Ho-Chunks with garbage bags in hand. I wasn't sure if they were out taking a stroll and enjoying the scenery because it wasn't too windy or cold that day so I decided to turn around and check them out.

As I whipped a youey, I pulled up next to them with confused looks on their faces. They were probably thinking, "Who is this crazy lady?" That's when I whipped out my camera and asked if I could snap a picture of their hard-work and dedication to their community their community.

At approximately high noon is when they started making their way to Shepley Road, picking up trash that others throw out their windows trying to be slick; approximately a two mile stretch they were about to endeavor.

Cici said, "That was the first time we did that but I see youth out there quite often. Sid Whitewing was behind us hauling our bags to the big garbage at the potch. Others would ride by to see how it was going and asked if we needed anything."

One of the little girls said the best part of cleaning up was picking up the cans. Cici also said, "Isabella picked Dandelions instead of trash the whole way. Angelina had a big Separate bag full of cans. Andres was the brave one going way into the ditch and grabbed what we couldn't. It was fun the kids had fun and we would do it again!"

Good thing no one had any woodticks stuck on them or saw any snakes, but they did see some baby turtles in the swampy area on townline. Low and behold, three and a half hours later, they had dirty hands, sweaty pits, and five bags of trash.

Great job Wittenberg crew and thanks for helping to keep our Ho-Chunk lands clean!

Wittenberg community members (Cici Bigjohn, Isabella Antone, Stella Decorah, Stellina Decorah, Rhea Sanchez, Angelina Sanchez, Andres Sanchez, and Alianna Sanchez), help make the roadsides looking fresh and clean again.
